PROMINENT YOUNG WOMAN DEAD

Mrs. C. W. Hamman Buried Sunday. Has Large Connection in County. Four Daughters Survive.

On Friday morning at 12:15 o'clock, Mrs. Anna Pearl Hamman, wife of Mr. C. W. Hamman, owner of M. Hamman Son & Co., succumbed at her late home in this city following an illness of nineteen days of erysipelas. Mrs. Hamman had been in ill health since last July. She suffered with myocarditis contributory to erysipelas. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Baptist church where Rev. E. C. Nall, pastor, paid a beautiful tribute to the life of Mrs. Hamman. Rev. J. R. Randolph, the Methodist minister, assisted in the services at the church. Members of the Cloverport Eastern Star Lodge attended the funeral in a body and the Eastern Star burial rites were said at the grave with Miss Nannie Cohen, Worthy Matron, presiding over the ceremonies.

The pall-bearers were: S. P. Conrad, J. M. Fitch, T. S. Nicholas and R. L. Oelze, L. B. Perkins, of Louisville, and H. O. Keys, of West Point.

Mrs. Hamman was the only daughter of Mary Jane Claycomb and Augustus Gibson, who before moving to Cloverport about 1896, lived near Lodi, where their daughter was born on December 31, 1880. On March 9, 1898, she was married to Charles William Hamman son of Mrs. Christina Hamman and the late Michael Hamman, of this city. To this union were born five children; a son, Harry J., who died in infancy, and four daughters, Misses Mary Christina, Charlie Lee, Anna Louise and Katherine Mae. Surviving with the husband and four daughters are three brothers, Wm. Gibson and J. E. Gibson, of Prospect, Ky., and Larkin Gibson, of Cloverport.

Mrs. Hamman was converted and united with the Baptist church at Sample when a young girl. After moving to Cloverport she transferred her membership here to this church. She was an active member of the local W. M. U. and of the Cloverport Order of Eastern Star.

Coming from one of the oldest and best known families in Breckinridge county, Mrs. Hamman was widely known throughout the county. She had extensive family connections and a wide circle of ardent friends both here and elsewhere. In his tribute to Mrs. Hamman's life, Rev. E. C. Nall spoke of her "as a woman whom no one had said ought against." She was devoted to her home and family, and was an indulgent mother and wife. Her home was ever a place of welcome to her friends. She will be greatly missed in the community.

Those who attended the funeral from out of Cloverport were: Mr. Chas. Hamby, Bowling Green; Mrs. Chas. Bouffier, Louisville; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Gibson, and Mr. W. H. Gibson, Prospect; Mr. J. B. Gibson, Irvington; Mr. Henry Gibson and Mr. Grayson Payne, Lodi; Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Keys, West Point; Mr. and Mrs. E. S. McAfee, Irvington, and L. B. Perkins, Louisville.

JURY EMpaneled FOR CIRCUIT COURT

Opening Day Has Good Crowd. Big Docket on Hand But Only Minor Cases.

On Monday, the opening day of the February term of Circuit Court, there was a large crowd of farmers, traders and those who had legal business. It was an ideal spring day so that there was the genial hand-clapping and the meeting of old and new friends upon every corner of the county's legal center. Horse trading was brisk, and there was much bustling around in general.

The docket for this term is rather heavy. In fact heavier than it has been for some time. Altogether there are not many big cases to be settled.

KY. FARM LOANS EXCEED OHIO

Relatively Unimportant States Patronize Farm Loans Most.

Washington, Feb. 10.—The State of Ohio, although the largest wealthiest and most populous State in the Federal farm loan district to which it belongs, has less use for the Federal Farm Loan Bank and its facilities than any other State in the district, which also includes Indiana, Kentucky, and Tennessee.

A statement sent to Congress by the Farm Loan Board dealing with the operations of the Farm Loan Bank of Louisville sets forth the following statistics for the various States in the district:

Ohio—Number of associations chartered, 44; number of loans made, 825; total amount loaned, $2,894,700; average amount loaned, $3,509.

Indiana—Number of associations, chartered, 95; number of loans made, 243; total amount loaned, $11,452,800; average loan made $3,532.

Kentucky—Number of associations chartered, 84; number of loans made, 1,937; total amount loaned, $5,768; amount loaned $5,768,400; average loan made, $2,948.

Tennessee—Number of associations chartered, 115; number of loans made, 2,840; total amount loaned, $7,637,300; average loan made, $2,689.

States like Florida and New Mexico and many of the relatively unimportant States of the South, patronized the farm loan system much more liberally than Ohio. The Bureau of Markets reports that the loaning operations of the system were discontinued ten months ago, pending a decision by the United States Supreme Court as to the constitutionality of the law, but it adds:

"Notwithstanding the cessation of business, the net earnings of each of the banks have materially increased. This was, of course, accomplished largely by the reduction of personnel incident to the discontinuance of loaning operations."

BIG STOCK REDUCING SALE FEB. 19

Golden Rule Store to Have Sensational Sale of Merchandise. Nothing Like it Before in the City.

Perhaps one of the most sensational sales, or, The Breckinridge News feels safe in saying, the most sensational sale in the way of merchandise ever to have taken place in Cloverport will be the big stock reducing sale which the Golden Rule Store is going to put on in Cloverport beginning Saturday, Feb. 19, and continuing seven days.

The Golden Rule Store has employed Mr. A. London, representing the T. K. Kelley Sales System, of Minneapolis, Minn., to put on this sale. Mr. London is here now invoicing the stock at the Golden Rule and simply slashing the prices in twain. He is considered a regular "Bargain Wizard," and this sale will prove the like.

It might be well said that this sale will have the similitude to a three ring circus. There is something doing every day and bargains hunter will have to keep on the alert in order not to miss a thing. For instance, the opening day of the sale, a $1 broom will be given away for 1c to the first 35 adult women who enter the store. There will be other attractions of this kind, and citizens from over Breckinridge, Hancock and Perry counties, are expected to grasp some of these bargains.

The Golden Rule Store's advertisement in this issue of The Breckinridge News quotes many of the bargains to be offered in the big sale.

"BORN DUNCES" ACHIEVED SUCCESS AND FAME.

Robert Clive started life with the sobriquet of "born dunce." His teachers pronounced him "impossible," and requested his parents to remove him from school. At 32 he could barely read or write. Yet Clive boasted that some day he would "show everybody."

He left home in rags and joined the army. During a critical engagement, and while severely wounded, he was called upon to command 3,000 men. Untrained and ridiculed by them, he forced those men forward by sheer grit and succeeded in defeating 5,000 men at Plassey, thereby laying the foundation of the British Empire in India. England erected a statue to his memory in Trafalgar square.

Another "born dunce" was Carolus Linnaeus, the Swedish naturalist. Born in Rashut in Smaland, Sweden, what little chance he had in life as a boy he threw away. "Unhandy at everything; even unfit for the pulpit," later wrote his critics. Yet in the fields alone where he was commanded to work he studied botany in a crude way, and seven years later was joyfully hailed as the greatest botanist of his age.—Detroit News.

FOOLING WITH HEALTH SERIOUS

I have frequently asked druggists "What do you push in a blood medicine?" The answer usually came, "The kind I can make the most money on." My answer has always been "Not me." I have succeeded pretty well and I have always recommended the one that I had found by experience to be the best and the one I would be willing to take myself or give to members of my own family. I have never offered the public a medicine that we do not use at home. This is why I can offer "Number 40 For The Blood," with a clear conscience; we have not only tried it on thousands of others, but on ourselves.

We take it in all cases where a blood medicine is needed, no matter in what form it shows itself and we get splendid results in rheumatism, catarrh, constipation, kidney, stomach and liver troubles. I firmly believe if everyone would begin in the spring and take "Number 40" they would escape malaria and fevers in all forms. J. C. Mendenhall, 40 years a druggist, Evansville, Ind. The best druggist in your neighborhood sells Number 40, but if it happens that he does not, send direct to J. C. Mendenhall Medicine Company, Evansville, Indiana, and receive it delivered to you at $1.25 per bottle, six bottles for $7.00.

Government Has Seized 250,000 Gals. Whiskey and Autos Worth $1,000,000.

Washington, Feb. 4.—More than 250,000 gallons of whiskey and automobiles worth $1,000,000 are now in possession of the Government as a result of its campaign against the illicit commerce in liquor, according to Wayne B. Wheeler, counsel for the Anti-Saloon League.

To guard this and other property seized by the Government in enforcement of prohibition the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill, reported today to the Senate, set aside $200,000 as requested by Mr. Wheeler.

The seized liquor and automobiles, according to testimony of Mr. Wheeler before a Senate committee, made public today, are to be sold by the Government.

That prohibition enforcement has been "50 percent effective in some places" was stated by Mr. Wheeler to the committee. He said that no good reason has yet been found for transferring prohibition enforcement from the Treasury Department to the Department of Justice.

HIS MOTHER'S SON, ABRAHAM LINCOLN

By Anne Goodwin Williams.

"Our prayer is always that the world may be a better place because of this child to whom we have given birth." So we may fancy his parents saying when Abraham Lincoln was born.

"Once upon a time," as all good stories begin, there lived a beautiful merry-hearted young girl in a little Kentucky town and as she grew to womanhood, many, because of her beauty of character as well as of person, sought her hand in marriage. And she, from among them all, chose the one who, to most people seemed the least desirable—a veritable "crooked stick," unbecomingly person, without money or education, one who even dared publicly to criticize wealthy slave owners for such ownership. "I guess God never meant to have one human being own another," he said in his homely dialect.

Such was Thomas Lincoln in whom Nancy Hanks had such faith that in marrying him she risked poverty and separation from her former friends, loyally upholding him and bravely giving her strength not only to the material responsibilities of motherhood but to the intellectual and moral training of her children in the midst of physical hardship.

What wonder that of such a mother, of such parents, a man like Abraham Lincoln was born! How natural that in himself he should combine the made him so welcome a comrade, merry, laughter-loving nature which with the deep earnestness which made him so dependable a leader; and that, with his great tenderness, he combined unflinching courage and sternness.

For those who would know Lincoln better, we recommend the Boy's Life of Lincoln, by Helen Nicolay, published by The Century Co., New York City; for those who would know in fiction form, the life of the parents of the great man, we suggest a most charming 1920 book, The Matrix by Maria Thompson Daviess, published by The Century Co., New York City; and for those who would see Lincoln, the President portrayed, we earnestly recommend the witnessing of John Drinkwater's wonderful play, Abraham Lincoln, making one see, in his last days of greatness, the man so often quoted as saying, "All that I am or ever shall be, I owe to my mother, God bless her."

The Following Impression of Mrs. Warren G. Harding was Gained by a Reporter for the New York World Upon the Occasion of Mrs. Harding's Recent Visit to New York.

As compared with the women in the widely published photographs, Mrs. Harding is a complete surprise. The erect and supple figure, which habitually almost bends backward, the delicate coloring and velvet skin carry the irresistible suggestion of youth. Her hair, gray rather than white, and worn high, is waived to the edge of her forehead in an elaborate coiffure like that affected by Queen Alexandra which accentuates her slender throat and gives her an added dignity. The blue eyes behind her glasses are both keen and humorous.

The movements of the First Lady-elect are quick, almost abrupt; her hand-shake is close, but instantly relaxed her manner assured and her speech unhesitating. Summed up, Mrs. Harding is too spontaneous to be a diplomat, but will bring to her high station a large measure of charm and unflagging spirit.

Her black satin gown of yesterday, with its slightly open neck to show a wide velvet band fastened with the diamond pin which was President Harding's most recent gift, will be replaced Inauguration Day by a street costume of blue charmeuse and chiffon of a tone deeper than Alice blue, trimmed with blue stones. This, with blue hat to match malines and straw ornamented with a blue and black wing, and a chiffon wrap, also blue one of two to be worn in milder or colder weather, were ordered yesterday from Hickson, who supplied Mrs. Hardins with five hats.

SLACKER SLOW ALL AROUND

A diplomat told at a tea a story about a slacker.

"In the first year of the war," he said, "before conscription was adopted, a great, hulking six-footer of 23 or 24 years rang a London woman's bell and tried to sell her some dahlias."

"The woman looked at his burrow of dahlias contemptuously. Then she said, 'I'm astonished to see a big strapping fellow like you selling dahlias here. Why aren't you with the army?'"

"The slacker gave her a bewildered look.

"Why, ma'am," he said, "they don't want dahlias in the army, do they?"—Washington Star.

WASHINGTON'S FAITH.

He Partook of the Communion With Presbyterians at Morristown.

To The New York Herald: In regard to Washington's religious belief the following, quoted from Lossing's "Field Book of the Revolution," should be of interest:

It is related that he called upon the Rev. Dr. Jones, the pastor of the Presbyterian church of Morristown, N. J., on learning that the communion service was to be observed in his church on the following Sabbath, and inquired whether communicants of another denomination were permitted to join with them.

The doctor replied, "Most certainly; ours is not the Presbyterians' table, General, but the Lord's, and hence we give the Lord's invitation to all his followers of whatever name."

"I am glad of that," said the General "that is as it ought to be; but, as I thought I would ascertain it from yourself, as I propose to join with you on that occasion. Though a member of the church of England, I have no exclusive partialities."

Washington was at the communion table on the following Sabbath. Robert K. Demarest, Bayside, February 8.

THE TRAMP IS COMING BACK.

The tramp, who almost disappeared during the war, is returning to the highways of the country and the cheap lodgings of the towns. By report, the new tramp although as shiftless and as homeless as ever, is better dressed than the old tramp was and since he cannot get whisky, has generally a more respectful air. The increase in the number of those who wander in search of work—or to avoid it—raises the old question of how to prevent vagrancy. Some authorities advocate farm labor colonies. At any rate there should be some place where men with neither means nor inclination to support themselves could be put to work. The more vagrants the more criminals.

VOTE $100,000,000 TO IMPROVE ROADS.

House Suspends Rules and Passes Measure, 278 to 58.

Washington, Feb. 7.—A bill authorizing the appropriation of $100,000,000 for road improvements during the fiscal year 1922 was passed today by the House, 278 to 58.

The measure also would make available for two years additional Federal funds already allotted to States for road work, but not expended. Taken up under suspension of rules, the bill needed a two-thirds vote for passage.

IN THE AUDIENCE

Charlotte Becker, in New York Herald.

I wonder what this play's about, I can't hear half of what they say—O, there's that charming Mrs. Brown! I called upon her yesterday.

And don't you think that frock is sweet? The blue one with a touch of red—A little to the right, my dear, The woman with the high coiffed head.

The girl in front of me's so cross, She turns and stares and stares at me But you can tell from her queer coat That she's not in society.

What was that tune the orchestra Just played? Was it "Be Still, My Own?" I'll have to stop as I go back And get it for our gramophone.

Heavens! that wasn't Mrs. Brown, 'Twas Mrs. Eheneser Hunt, And Mrs. Brown's—O, horrors Maud—The girl that's sitting right in front!

That woman back of us has talked Right on and on and on without A pause—I can't hear what they say, I don't know what this play's about!

Definition Needed Nowadays.

"Yes we women like to clean house occasionally." "Are you talking domestic science or politics?"—Courier-Journal.

DIETETIAN SCORES BOARDING HOUSE DIET.

Boston, Feb. 7.—The man who lives on the proverbial boarding house diet of white bread, potatoes, meat occasionally, prunes and skim milk may look well, but he lacks vitality and tone, Dr. Martin Edwards, a specialist in dietetics, said in an address to the Methodist Ministers' Association today.

He recommended fruits and cereals as the things that give mineral salts and vitamins.

PORTER HAS BEEN ILL.

Jim Webb, colored, the faithful and accommodating porter, who has been employed at the L. H. & St. L. shops for a number of years, is convalescing from a severe case of pneumonia. Webb has been ill for several weeks, but he is able to sit up at present.

THE INCOME TAX

Sommerville Journal.

Now make your income tax return, The time that's left is short; You'd better think of hustling 'round And making your report. For Uncle Sam demands to know, Exactly, if you please, How much you got from salaries, And partnerships and fees, And rents, commissions, bonuses, And royalties, and such, And interest on mortgages, In each case just how much, From pensions, sales of bonds and stocks, From settlements of debts, From payments for your services, Such as a dentist gets, From dividends of every kind, From trust or octopus, And other income or ma list, As "Miscellaneous."

It is of course a beastly bore, But it would be much worse, If you were sentenced to report The outgo from your purse. Be thankful you don't have to tell, Where all the money went, Reporting an exact account Of everything you spent!

PUBLIC CHARACTERS.

A Start Made Toward Listing Some Persons Everybody Meets.

To The New York Herald: I suppose every man has his pet aversions. These are a few of mine:

The patrioteers who prate of the duty we owe our country while they sell the stocks they own at the end of the year for the purpose of reducing their income tax.

The cheerful idiot who persists in saying "I'll tell the world" or "I'll say so."

The simperer who attends public luncheons and is seriously impressed by paid speakers who deliver "messages."

The breezy "gent" who is given to demanding "pep" and "a lift more pep."

The unctuous fraud, well stocked up, who pretends to believe that, after all, prohibition is a good thing.

The smug panhandler who solicits subscriptions from ignorant domestics and pious old ladies in order to finance reform "league" or "society" upon which he is dependent for support. The professional "uplifter" of what soever kind.

The common gull who believes that the late war made this hoary old sphere "a newer and a better world." Albany, Feb. 7, Simon Creel.

POWER OF SUGGESTION

A weary wayfarer to whose back clung the remains of an O. D. blouse decorated with a rusty red chevron, flopped down under a tree in a tight-fisted farmer's yard and proceeded to go to sleep.

"Get out of there," yelled the farmer, coming to the door with a shotgun in his hand. "Get now, or I'll shoot."

The wayfarer stirred slightly in his slumbers and a beatific smile spread over his features.

"Shoot," he murmured happily. "You're faded."—American Legion Weekly.

GEORGE WASHINGTON

"First in war and first in peace"—
With love we speak of him again
Whose praises with the years increase—
"And first in the hearts of his countrymen."

Remarkable Honors Paid Washington on His Inaugural Trip

At the time he was unanimously elected President, Washington was the idol of his country, and his name and fame were known to the entire civilized world. His trip from his beautiful home on the Potomac was interrupted by receptions, fetes, addresses and dinners. Every person who was able to reach the roads along which he was to pass, or the cities selected as stations on his slow journey northward, joined the throngs that made his trip the most triumphal procession this continent had witnessed. To those thousands who lined the roads from Virginia to New York, the great, serious figure of the "Father of his Country" was the center of all their national hopes.

On April 6, 1789, both houses of congress met in New York city, at the time the capital, and elected George Washington President of the United States. No other name had been proposed. For Vice President there were eleven nominations. John Adams receiving the highest vote—thirty-four—was announced elected. Washington received sixty-nine votes. As soon as it could be arranged, Charles Thomson, secretary of congress, was dispatched to Mount Vernon to apprise General Washington of his election. Thomson, who had been secretary of the continental congress, reached Washington's home on April 14, between 10 and 11 o'clock in the morning. The master of Mount Vernon was making his usual tour of his farms and Mrs. Washington entertained the messenger of the congress.

Before sunrise on the morning of April 16 a messenger had come from Alexandria with an invitation to a public dinner there, and in his diary for the day Washington wrote:

"About 10 o'clock I bade adieu to Mount Vernon, to private life, and to domestic felicity, and with a mind oppressed with more anxious and painful sensations than I have words to express, set out for New York. In company with Mr. Thomson and Colonel Humphreys, with the best disposition to render service to my country in obedience to its call, but with less hope of answering its expectations."

Of Washington's reception in Philadelphia a chronicler of the day wrote:

Old City Tavern, Philadelphia.

"Thousands of freemen, whose hearts burned with patriotic fire, fell into the ranks almost every square we marched, until the column swelled beyond credibility itself and, having conducted the man of our hearts to the City Tavern; he was introduced to a very grand and plentiful banquet, which was prepared for him by the citizens. At dinner thirteen patriotic toasts were drank."

The night of the 20th the President spent as the guest of Robert Morris, then one of the senators of Pennsylvania, and better known as the financial genius of the country, having founded its first bank and financed the cause of liberty at a time when the outlook was chilling.

The trip through New Jersey was continued through Princeton, New Brunswick and Elizabeth, where Washington boarded a barge and was rowed to New York. Flags and floral decorations marked each step; everywhere he went Washington heard shouts for a conqueror's ears. He was hailed as a deliverer and acclaimed as a deity, but throughout all the heart-felt adulation paid him by those who almost worshiped him, the greatness of the man was revealed by his artless modesty, his composure and his graceful, tactful acceptance of the honors paid him.

Washington arrived in Elizabeth on April 23, just a week from the day he set out from Mount Vernon. A "propitious gale" was blowing from the party set out across Newark bay for New York. A barge, built for the purpose, and rowed by "twelve old captains of vessels who had retired from business," conveyed the President and party. The oarsmen wore white shirts adorned with ribbons. One after another vessels fell into line behind them and by the time they were nearing the Battery there was a small flotilla. Every ship and sloop bore a holiday appearance save one, a Spanish vessel. It was with some concern the committee noted its solemn aspect. They feared some discourtesy, but, as the barge approached, its captain gave a signal at which flags of all nations were burst into view, and from its battery a salute of thirteen guns was fired.

A large sloop joined the procession off Bedloe's Island, and as it neared the barge the party of ladies and gentlemen aboard her sang an "eloquent ode appropriate to the occasion and set to the music of 'God Save the King.'" The wharves from the Battery to Wall street ferry, where the landing was made, were filled with welcoming boats. Boudinot estimated their number as tens of thousands. The ferry stairs were carpeted and the railings covered with crimson hangings. The President, preceded by the committee, was received on the landing by Governor Clinton and some of the foremost citizens. The streets were so blocked with eager citizens that it was half an hour before the committee could fulfill its commission by escorting their eminent charge to the house prepared for his reception.

Ancestral Home in English County of "Hero of Two Worlds"

In the village of Sulgrave, Eng., in the heart of the Northamptonshire lones, is still to be seen the manor house in which, until 1606, there lived the family of Laurence Washington, whose great-grandson, finding his way to Virginia in 1657, was to become the great-grandfather of George Washington, the first President of the United States. Carved in the corner of the stone lintel of this manor house is to be seen the Washington Stars and Stripes.

It was this great descendant's stroke for liberty that drew from the English statesman, Chatham, the whole-hearted declaration: "If I were an American as I am an Englishman, while a foreign troop was landed in my country, I never would lay down my arms—never, never, never." Chatham did not stand alone; with him being Pitt and Shelburne, all of whom saw that the threatened liberties of England could be saved in Washington's birthday.

Washington won for himself the title of "The Hero of Two Worlds," as a result of the victory of the British democrats who fought for more liberty under the rule of the king, made effective by Washington's successes. The title was bestowed upon him by Thomas Carlyle, who also nicknamed him "Scipio Americanus" and "Cromwell-Grandson," the latter title being given him because, like Cromwell, he fought to crush the pretense of a king.

The house, in Northamptonshire, England, was built before the domestic survey, and came into the possession of the Washington family in 1564. In 1914 the mansion, home of the ancestors of George Washington was bought by the British Peace Centenary committee in celebration of the one hundred years' peace between England and America. A committee of the Sulgrave society met in Manchester to raise an endowment fund for repairs and furniture. Toward this the Sulgrave Institute of America contributed $50,000; $25,000 was raised in London, and Manchester furnished the balance of $50,000. Among the subscriptions was $2,500 from the Stars and Stripes Women's club in Manchester, collected as a memorial to the American soldiers who died in the city.—Detroit News.

WASHINGTON.

Dust of the gray years cannot dim thy name,
Nor changes chill thy country's pride in thee;
Thou art as some bright fire that steadily
Burns high above the little crackling flame
That lesser men may kindle, dreaming fame
In one with party's brief idolatry.
On the low altars of humanity
Glory is quenched by the first breath of blame.
While the log's heart glowed with a living heat
The fabled Meleager knew not death,
But when it cooled his own must cease to beat—
He to the envious gods must yield his breath;
But children's children keep alive for thee
The brand their sires' love kindled reverently.

Washington Shaft Country's Tribute to Her Great Son

The two great monuments in the United States, of the many hundreds that have been erected in all parts of our country, are the Bunker Hill monument, in Boston, dedicated in 1843, a shaft to commemorate the beginning of our fight for independence, and the Washington monument, at Washington, erected to the memory of him who had been most instrumental in bringing about the result.

For 30 years after Washington's death the project was, every now and then, suggested, but nothing definite happened until September, 1833, when the Washington National Monument society was formed, with Chief Justice John Marshall, then 73 years old, as president. It was not until three years later that advertisements were inserted inviting designs from American artists.

An effort was made to secure the funds by popular subscription and by 1847 $87,000 was in hand and preparation for construction was begun. Congress, by resolution, granted a site where the monument now stands and the cornerstone was laid on the Fourth of July, 1848, in the presence of the executive, legislative and judicial branches of the government, foreign ministers and officers and a vast concourse of citizens from all parts of the Union.

The work of erection progressed steadily until 1854, when the shaft had reached a height of 156 feet and had cost $300,000. The treasury of the society now being exhausted, a memorial was presented to congress asking it to take action in the matter. Politics in the government prevented a ready response and it was not until 1859 that the society was given a formal charter.

The Washington monument was finally finished in the winter of 1884-85, and it was decided to dedicate it upon the anniversary of the birth of the man to whom it had been erected. Consequently, on February 22, 1885, there were impressive ceremonies at the national capital, when the monument was turned over to the nation.

The formal presentation of the monument was made at the base of the grand obelisk, but owing to the raw, cold weather that existed the dedication ceremonies proper took place in the hall of the house of representatives.

Quaker Minister Is Grateful to Tanlac

Rev. Parker Moon

Nearly everybody in Southwest Missouri either knows or has heard of the Rev. Parker Moon, who for a full half century has devoted his life and talents to Sunday school and organization work for the Society of Friends or Quakers.

"Uncle Parker," as he is more familiarly known, came from fine old rugged Quaker stock, and there is not a better known or more highly respected citizen in that part of the state. In referring to his remarkable restoration to health by Tanlac, he said:

"About five years ago I suffered a general breakdown. My principal trouble was nervous indigestion. My appetite was very poor and my food seldom agreed with me, and I had to live on very restricted diet. I suffered a great deal from headaches and dizzy spells; I had severe pains across the small of my back and was badly constipated most of the time. In fact I was so weak and rundown I was not able to attend to my duties.

"This condition made me very nervous and I could not sleep at night. Frequently I would lie awake most all night and was in that condition more or less for five years. My physician said he could not do anything for me and suggested a change of climate. I then moved to Texas and went back and forth three times but did not get the relief I had hoped for. Finally, I got so bad off I was not able to get around with any degree of comfort. I was also told I had heart trouble.

"I had read about Tanlac and, as it had been very highly recommended to me, I decided to try it. I got a bottle and had taken only a few doses until I could notice a marked improvement in my condition. I noticed especially that I was not troubled any more with sour stomach after eating, which was a great relief.

"I kept on taking Tanlac until I fully regained my health. My appetite is splendid; I enjoy my meals and I do not find it necessary now to take any laxative medicines of any kind. I can sleep much better and am not nearly so nervous.

"I take great pleasure in recommending Tanlac to anyone who needs a good system builder, or who suffers with stomach trouble. I have recommended Tanlac to a great many of my friends and am pleased to reach others by giving this statement for publication.

Tanlac is sold in Cloverport by Wedding's Drug Store, in Kirk by Addison, in Ammons by Wm. H. Mattingly Bros., in Addison by L. D. Dutschke, and in Stephensport by R. A. Shellman.—Advertisement.

ELKS SCARCE IN NATIONAL PARK

Only Very Few Observed This Winter—There Used to Be
Thousands of Them.

Have the majority of the elk in Yellowstone Park died from natural causes or been killed during the past year, or are they hiding in some retreat deep in the mountains? This question is worrying the forest officers of the Absaroka National Forest, for on ranges where ordinarily thousands of these animals could be seen, only a very few have been observed this winter.

Just why this is so no one seems to know. One theory is that the open fall and winter has caused the elk to remain back in the higher and more inaccessible portions of the park. Open falls in the past, however, have not caused the elk to abandon their usual customs or habits.

Whether the actual numbers now comprising the Yellowstone band have been greatly lowered during the past year or not, say officials of the United States Department of Agriculture, it is at least true that the shrinkage of the Yellowstone herd during the past five years has been alarming. In 1914, the Yellowstone herd was estimated at about 25,000. In 1917 17,500 were counted out and if the figures for the present year, estimated by those in close touch with the situation, are true, there remains much less than half this number. In 1919, 3,300 head were killed in the Yellowstone band, the supervisor of the Absaroka National Forest reports. No herd of wild animals can sustain an annual shrinkage in numbers which the Yellowstone band has, for any length of time, and not face complete extermination within a few years.

SCARCITY OF QUAIL DUE TO BY-GONE RAIL FENCE.

Those who are deploring the scarcity of game birds in this region and have been attributing the dearth of quail to various influences have overlooked one of the most important reasons for the shrinkage.

The old fashioned rail fence, its angles choked with briars and weeds formed a natural winter refuge for the birds. Snow might drift mountains high, but all was snug and cozy in the depths of the tangle of vegetation which is no more since the introduction of wire as a fencing material. Headlands are ploughed at most to the boundary lines of fields these days and the brambles and berry bushes are fast disappearing.

With one of his best hiding places gone the quail has to struggle for existence. He is a chery chap and his whistle at eventide near the homes of men is an evidence of his friendliness. He ought to have everything that is possible done for his preservation. Winter feeding is good, but something to take the place of the old rail fence would also be helpful.—New York Herald.

TAXI—PART II

"Hi, you! D—n you! Hey! You! Driver! Confound your d—d imperiousness! Hey! How am I going to get home?" The first of these cries was very plainly, the last very faintly heard by Mr. Randolph. After them came down the wind something that sounded very much like the ghost of a wall of despair, but the driver paid no heed. His attention was absorbed by something quite different; the dry sob of a little heap of smoke-colored chiffon.

Detours, subterfuges and the finesse of the road-faker were swept from Randolph's mind; he made straight for the bridge and home, but long before they reached the river all sound

"Greenwood Cemetery, Sir," he barked and then issued from the cab and in its stead reigned a purposeful, almost menacing silence. What was she thinking in there? What could she think? Why didn't she go right on crying and keep her mind fully occupied with that?

As they swept down the incline from the bridge into City Hall park he suddenly realized that he had been on the verge of giving himself away. He half turned his head and shouted through the speaking-slot, "What address, miss?"

Her voice came back to him from very close as though her face had been pressed to the glass in an effort to make him out. "At the corner of the Avenue and East Ninth street."

Ten minutes later he drew up his cab at the appointed spot and reached back to throw open the door, but kept his foot on the clutch release, leaving the gears in mesh, first speed ahead.

All his precautions were in vain. As he opened the cab door his coat sleeve was seized in a very determined grip and drawn inward, catching his elbow in a jiu-jitsu leverage that left him the Hobson's choice of either getting out and facing his captor or listening to his arm break. He chose to get down from his seat quickly.

"Well, Bobby," murmured Miss Van T.

Mr. Randolph attempted no evasion; he handed the lady to the curb and guided her gently toward her own door and up the high steps. "Madge," he said, "you fought a great fight to-night and when you had won you felt sorry for Tremont and surrendered. You were swept too high on the wave of the best that is in you. Promise me that you won't forget that you have won. Promise me that you will wait and take Tremont, all of him, with honor."

"What do you mean? What did you hear?" cried Miss Van T. angrily, her pale face suddenly flushing.

"From the start of the ride to the finish I heard every word," declared Mr. Randolph frankly, "and more."

"And more!" repeated the hard-pressed girl. "What do you mean by more?" She still tried to browbeat him, but remembering one incredibly long kiss, her eyes fell in the unequal battle with Bobby's and attempted to create diversion by staring at his gartered legs and heavily booted feet.

"Look up, Madge. Look at me," said Mr. Randolph and waited patiently until first her long lashes fluttered and then her lovely eyes swept slowly up to his face. "That's it," he continued as their looks met and locked. "Let's hold that so we can't lie."

"Why should I lie if you really heard everything?" asked Miss Van T., and suddenly smiled.

"Madge, you little devil," said Mr. Randolph, suppressing an impulse to shake her, "can you think of what you've been doing and laughing?"

"Yes, I can, just now," said Miss Van T., in little gasping phrases that to a man, especially one of Mr. Randolph's flippant nature, carried only their face value in words, but which to any woman would have read as plainly as the red-weather signal, "Look out for showers of tears followed by storm."

"Well," said Mr. Randolph solemnly, "if you really don't realize just where you have been, let me tell you. First you flew high into clean air and you took Tremont with you. You were possessed of a vision and you made him see it, too, a mirage of those lifted places that are the altar of the mind before love. Just a mirage, an illusion of perfect happiness, which could reason tells us we can't ever turn into reinforced concrete and plant in the yard, but which we must either forever hold as a vision or admit that love is a sordid and wingless thing."

Miss Van Teller's eyes fell from his frank gaze. Something seemed to crumple within her; she put her arms around Mr. Randolph's neck, clung to him, dropped her face against his shoulder and sobbed, not noisily, but as one who weeps to rest.

He held her close to him and went on, his face set as though to a duty. "Then what did you do? Because he hesitated, merely hesitated at the high door of adoration, you promptly slammed it and dropped plumb straight down like that traitor archangel Johnny out of heaven into the arms of hell."

"Bobby!" cried Miss Van T., throwing back her head and struggling to release herself. "How dare you say a thing like that? How dare you be here, anyway? I hate you. I don't know how I ever could have thought I loved you. I fell, but it was into Beacher's arms, and I wish I was there right now." More sobs, convulsive ones, that shook the slim body in Mr. Randolph's embrace from twitching shoulder to tired feet.

Least the reader be startled by what's coming next it will do well to remind him that this poignant scene was staged at three o'clock in the morning on the high stoop of the Van Teller residence in East Ninth street and never left the perimeter of the door-mat which in itself presented an almost feminine contradiction, in that it bore, done in red on its face, the word "Welcome," but was nevertheless padlocked and chained to the iron railing.

Even as Miss Van Teller was sobbing her heart out and Mr. Randolph was standing in the bewilderment of one who knows he has not only taken the wrong turning but placed both his "Break Away an' Come Along of Me," feet in a beartrap, a thick, heavy, unsympathetic voice arose from the foot of the steps.

"Here! Youse! Break away an' come along of me."

Memories of a mischievous boyhood swarmed to Mr. Randolph's mind, recollections of those days when, as chief of the Madison Square gang, his ears had tingled to the cry of "Cheese it, de cop! We're pinched, fellers!" A cold sweat came out upon his brow; he slowly relaxed his grip on Miss Van T.'s person and whispered tremulously to her to keep her nerve but hand him her latchkey.

Over his shoulder he said with forced calm, "On what charge, officer?"

"Same old dope," replied the policeman phlegmatically; "drunk, disorderly. Come along, now, or I'll want me to climb them steps so's we can all roll down together!"

During that speech Mr. Randolph made a lucky shot at the torbide stealthily turned the lock and opened the door. "The way's clear, Madge," he whispered. "Beat it."

"Oh, is it, Bobby, you dear," rattled Miss Van T. in a stage whisper that could be heard across the street. "I didn't mean it, really, what I said about hating you. But I do love Beacher, Bobby, and I'll—I'll—"

"For heaven's sake, Madge," groaned Mr. Randolph, hearing sounds as of a bear starting to swarm a tree, "keep all that till New Year's."

"I was just going to say," continued Miss Van T. breathlessly but with a cold eye fixed on the cumbrous shadow coming up the steps, "that I'll owe it to you, Bobby. I'll owe it to you. D'you understand?"

"Sure," lied Mr. Randolph as he pushed her firmly through the door, then caught its knob, slammed it shut and turned to meet Nemesis. "Hello, Flahabarty!"

The huge policeman stopped his ponderous but sure progression and stared long and suspiciously into Mr. Randolph's face. Finally he gave a grunt of recognition. "Slim," he said to himself aloud as though somewhere within his vast bulk there were a separate monitor that had to be tipped off to the situation, "Slim Hervey."

"Sure," said Mr. Randolph, leading the way toward his wagon. "Who else did you think it was at this time o' night?"

"How did I know," demanded Mr. Flahabarty gruffly but not unpleasantly for him, "as you had taken on deliveries o' fancy dress-goods on top o' your regular line?"

He breathed heavily and allowed his eyes to protrude farther than usual in search of a thought which he sensed in the near distance. "I tell you, Slim," he finally continued, "I don't know what this burg is a-comin' to. Even the street kind used to have a man to take 'em home, but this here was a bit o' high-flyin' stuff—me, I could see that—an' they had to give it to a cah!"

"Forget it," said Bobby nervously. "All I says," continued Mr. Flahabarty, "is thank God both o' my galls is married to hairy men that can an' does lick the stuffin's outen 'em."

"Well, here we are," said Mr. Randolph as he stooped to turn her over. From his seat behind the wheel he began to breathe more easily and leaned out to study the face of his friend, the officer, to make sure that therein was no guile.

"Cheer up, Jim," he said not quite reassured. "Forget it."

"I'll try," said Mr. Flahabarty dubiously, "but it'll come hard, 'bein' the first time I ever seen a thing like that. She sure give you a tussle, Slim!"

PART III.

Maid's Adventure.

Take a young girl of about twenty who, in her childhood, was pampered of fortune in money, position, good breeding, and pets, turn her loose on the world at the age of ten with no prop but a faithful, sickly and destitute old nurse. Kill off the nurse a couple of years later, let the girl fend for herself as scullery-maid and what not through the uninteresting stage that precedes the sudden bloom of unexpected beauty, give her a long succession of jobs secured "on her looks" and lost because she wouldn't, lead her up to the crowded portal of despair and the long-drawn-out surrender; then snatch her suddenly back from destruction, feed her, give her the sole freedom for a night of Mr. Robert Hervey Randolph's comfortable apartment and—what will she do? The answer is easy. She will find the bath and turn on the hot water.

That was the very first thing that Miss Imogene Pamela Thornton did after she had finished spying from the window on the movements of what she supposed was Mr. Randolph and what, in reality, was Mr. Patrick O'Reilly in Mr. Randolph's best top-hat, best suit of evening clothes and overcoat, best gray silk muffler, price twenty-two dollars, and best patent-leather shoes—the last a very tight fit which made the revamped gentleman's gait a cross between that of a chicken on a hot stove and a drunk on his reluctant way home.

Even the unsuspecting Miss Thornton was puzzled by that baling locomotion in connection with what she knew of Mr. Randolph, but she added it, two and two, with the mysterious twenty minutes spent by that gentleman and the driver in the recesses of the cab, apparently to settle a difference in ideas as to the value of a waiting taxi, and decided that poor Mr. Randolph must have issued from the interview in a semi-crippled state.

She herself was too excited to let pity altogether absorb her. Without waiting for either the tortured wayfarer or the taxi to get quite out of sight, she dropped the window curtain and turned to possess herself of her world of comfort for a night. A starved instinct led her straight to the luxuriously appointed bathroom. As previously intimated, she turned on the hot water and clasped her hands ecstatically as she watched its crystalline surge and imagined she could smell the opalescent steam.

But not for long was she inactive. Having surrendered to circumstance to the extent of promising to stay in the flat until ten the following morning, she decided to do the job wholeheartedly, for Imogene Pamela was one of those lucky and fated young women who can never give themselves by halves. If happiness so much as showed its nose, it was her nature to tackle blindly for its waist and go to the mat for the immediate present.

Consequently, let not her modesty be misjudged when it is related that, in the short time it took to fill the bath, she accomplished the following: Rooted out Mr. Randolph's best silk pajamas, found his softest bathrobe, filled a hot-water bottle and slipped it far down between the too cold linen sheets of his big bed. Continuing at this rate of achievement, it may be imagined that in ten minutes more the young lady, having bathed, was curled up and sound asleep. Not on your life!

Item: It took her twenty-one minutes by the clock to scrub out the memory of the scabby zinc bathtubs of many years. Item: Twenty more minutes to wash her hair. Item: Half an hour more to scrub her underwear and stockings. Assorted items: Various pauses during which she shamelessly looked at herself in a full-length mirror of such pure reflecting qualities as had not crossed her path since England was a pup. After that, a long, entrancing item, called "drying her hair."

Did you blame her, three lines back, in your heart for her frequent inspections of self in the mirror? If you did, look at her now! Mr. Randolph's bathrobe is billowed at her waist and tied tight to keep it from trailing on the floor; for almost a like reason, its sleeves are rolled up above her elbows. It is open in a V at the neck, showing the adolescent curve of a virginal but much excited bosom.

With a woolly towel in both hands, she plants herself before the staid old looking-glass and gives it such a treat as it has never before savored in its sixty-two years of service to the Randolph family. Rub, rub, rub with the towel. Her cheeks grow pink and plumper, her eyes round and rounder. They twinkle and smile, and once, when she made a little face at herself, they laughed out loud. Her hair slowly wakes from its stringy dampness until it, too, bursts into a sort of light and curly merriment. Pamela puffs out her cheeks and blows at its reflection.

When all the rubbing is done, even to the last rite where they divide the fragrant flood into two waves falling over the bosom and mercilessly knead the damp ent into folds of the driest bit of the towel, she drops that implement and runs into the big room where the dying open fire blinks its red eye as though it had been waiting up for her.

CURE FOR TUBERCULOSIS DISCOVERED BY FRENCH

Patients Treated With Antitoxin in 1913 and 1914 in Good Health Says French Scientist.

Paris, Feb. 7.—After a lapse of about seven or eight years Prof. d'Arsonval, member of the Institute of the Academy of Medicine, has presented a report to the French Academy of Sciences on the curative treatment of tuberculosis by a new method discovered by the Swiss bacteriologist, Henri Spahlinger. The method was first applied in 1913 and 1914, in hospitals in England, France and Switzerland, on patients suffering both from the minor forms of tuberculosis and advanced phthisis.

Since that time those patients who were pronounced cured have been kept under observation. All of them are declared to be alive and in good health and they have shown no symptoms of a relapse for the last six years, although they underwent no further anti-tubercular treatment of any sort.

These results are vouched for, among others, by the London physician, Dr. Leonard L. B. Williams, fellow of the Royal Society of Medicine and other scientific bodies.

The treatment takes the form of injections of anti-toxins and ferments, which are modified according to the acute symptoms, then immunizing the patients completing the cure and preventing a relapse.

As originally described before the Academy of Medicine of Prof. Letulle, the method consists of intra-muscular injections of combination of antigenic solutions and ferments. It is claimed that the treatment causes the closure of lung cavities and the disappearance of the bacilli.

PRESIDENT AND VICE PRES. OFFI- CIALLY ELECTED

Congress Formally Declares
Harding and Coolidge Elected. 404 Electoral Votes.

Washington, Feb. 9.—Warren G. Harding of Ohio and Calvin Coolidge, of Massachusetts, were formally declared today by Congress to be elected President and Vice President of the United States for four years, beginning next March 4.

Thus was written the final chapter in the history of the 1920 Presidential elections. The scene was laid in the chamber of the House of Representatives with the Democratic Vice President Marshall presiding. The occasion was the canvassing of the electoral votes cast by the electors chosen on November 2, 1920 for the Republican candidate and 127 for the Democratic candidates, former Governor James M. Cox of Ohio, and Franklin D. Roosevelt of Hyde Park, N. Y.

Friends of Candidates Present.
The recording of the votes was attended by all the formality and solemnity prescribed by the Constitution and there not only were present the members of the Senate and House, but many relatives and friends of the successful candidates.

Two highly-polished mahogany boxes, inlaid with rosewood and holly-wood were dumb actors in this drama of democratic government. Resting on the Vice President's desk they contained the official ballots of the electors of the forty-eight States. In alphabetical order beginning with Alabama's vote, the returns, in large envelopes blazing with seals, were opened by the Vice President, handed to the Senate and House tellers—one Republican and one Democrat representing each body—and read to the assemblage and recorded.

At the conclusion of the announcements and tally, Vice President Marshall declared formally that Mr. Harding had been chosen President and Mr. Coolidge Vice President—in official language that the announcement should "be deemed a sufficient declaration of the persons elected President and Vice President of the United States, each for a term beginning March 4, 1921."

The joint session today was ordered by resolution of both Senate and House. At 1 o'clock, led by two Senate pages carrying the ballot boxes, the Senate, following the Vice President and escorted by its sergeant-at-arms, secretary and other officials, proceeded to the House chamber, where they were announced with ceremony, the House membership rising as the senatorial party entered. As prescribed by law, the Vice President took charge of the session, with speaker Gillett seated at his left and the Senators at the right of the chamber.

In opening the ceremonies Mr. Marshall gave the usual warning against demonstrations by the spectators, a warning which always has been honored in the breach until the galleries lost their enthusiasm under the verbal procession of formal announcements by the four tellers.

The votes canvassed today were cast last January 10 by the electors meeting in their respective States and have since been arriving almost daily at the Vice President's office. Duplicate returns also have been sent by set be filed with the Federal District mail and the law requires that a third Court of each State Among the personal messengers who brought the ballots to Washington were women serving as such for the first time in the nation's history.

POOR BLOOD IS JUST LIKE SLOW POISON

Makes You Feel Lazy and Discouraged. You Get Nothing Done.

PEPTO-MANGAN PURIFIES

Tune Up Your Blood with It. Notice the Difference With Rich Red Blood in Your Veins.

The man or woman or the child with a sickly-looking complexion, a pale wan face, has blood that is filled with poison. Instead of rich red blood coursing through their veins, they are trying to get along with blood that is weak and thin. It doesn't carry life-giving qualities through the body. You see those men and women every day. They are so tired. Their shoulders droop. They slouch. It is all they can do to get around.

As soon as you begin to feel that way take Pepto-Mangan, the well-known blood tonic. It will clear away the poisons and make your blood rich with red corpuscles.

Pepto-Mangan is prepared in both liquid and tablet form. One has the same medicinal value as the other. Take either kind you prefer. But be sure you get the genuine Pepto-Mangan—"Gude's." The full name, "Gude's Pepto-Mangan," should be on the package.—Advertisement.

ANYONE MAY HAVE OF- FICIAL GRAIN GRADE

Grading Samples in Grain Inspection Offices.

INSPECTION MADE BY LICENSED GRADERS.

All That Is Necessary Is to Submit Samples of Required Volume in Prescribed Form and Pay a Small Fee—Advantages to Farmer and Miller—Offices in Principal Cities.

The farmer, the country buyer, the miller, or anyone else may have samples of wheat or shelled corn inspected and graded by grain inspectors licensed by the Secretary of Agriculture. All that is necessary is to send a sample of the required volume in the prescribed form and to pay the inspection fee.

Grading is done only by grain inspectors licensed by the Secretary of Agriculture. The offices of Federal grain supervision, Bureau of Markets, do not inspect and grade wheat or shelled corn except when an appeal has been entered on a grade assigned by a licensed inspector, or where a dispute as to uninspected grain has been referred to the Secretary of Agriculture.

The offices of the Federal grain supervision, however, may furnish the names of the nearest inspectors with advice as to taking and forwarding samples inspected. There is no prescribed fee for grading samples, but the Secretary has specified that fees shall be reasonable. This information can be obtained from the nearest Federal grain inspector. The list of offices is given in the accompanying box.

When grade is assigned on samples submitted the inspection certificate covers only the sample, it being specifically set out that such grading does not apply to the entire lot from which the sample was taken. Unless the inspector himself or an official sampler takes the sample from the lot of grain, he is not permitted to certify further than as to the sample submitted. In most cases of contemplated purchase, however, it probably happens that the interested parties agree that the sample is representative and that the grade given shall apply to the entire lot of wheat or shelled corn.

The size of the samples submitted and the manner of forwarding it are important to determine the correct grade. The sample should be representative of the entire lot of grain. It should be at least two quarts in volume, 1 1/8 pints of which should be placed in an air-tight container and the balance enclosed in a clean cloth sack. Samples sent in paper bags, cigar boxes or other makeshift containers can not properly graded.

The principal benefit to the farmer is that he has a correct grading by a disinterested inspector as a basis for prices. The same advantage accrues to the miller or dealer, with the additional feature of the check upon his own grading in accordance with Federal standards.

ROAD BUILDING IN 1920 SUFFERED DIFFICULTIES

Labor and Materials Were Too High to Justify Road Construction; Funds Limited too.

Every kind of road cost about twice as much to build in 1920 as it did in 1917, according to the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, United States Department of Agriculture, and highway construction suffered more than any other class of work through railroad congestion, strikers, labor troubles, and material shortages.

After the war there was a great public demand for improved roads. Many roads had been seriously damaged by war traffic, and it appeared that the return of men from military service would provide an abundance of labor. The army of laborers which was expected to apply for the work did not, however, materialize. On the contrary, there was a distinct shortage of labor, and wages reached the highest levels attained in the history of the country. In 1917, competent labor could be secured for from $1.50 to $3 per day, but the corresponding wages in 1920, were from $3 to $5 for a shorter day's work.

In proportion to this demand there was also a pronounced scarcity of construction materials. Sand, gravel, stone, and cement, and materials commonly used in road work increased in price between 1917 and 1920 from 50 to 100 per cent. Naturally, these increases in cost were reflected in the prices paid to contractors for road work. Gravel roads increased from $4,535 to $7,250 per mile; concrete from $21,165 to upward of $40,000 per mile, and brick roads from $33,000 to $55,000 per mile.

As funds available for road construction are largely limited by statute, or by the returns from taxation, a majority of the States this year have deliberately withheld work, the plans for which had been completed, until they could obtain a greater return for their expenditure.

MOLE A NUISANCE BUT HIS COAT'S VALUABLE

American Moleskins Marketed Last Year 20 Per Cent Greater.

"The little gentleman in black velvet" who caused the death of King William III by digging the burrow that tripped the English king's horse is finding his black velvet jacket a coveted possession. Reports from the leading fur dealers in this country indicate that the number of American moleskins marketed during the last fiscal year was 20 per cent greater than for the preceding 12 months. The Bureau of Biological Survey, United States Department of Agriculture, is largely responsible for this increase. In conducting demonstrations in cooperation with the public schools, State extension service, and other organizations, the bureau has encouraged the eradication of the mole from territories where the little animal has become a pest. Boys' and girls' clubs have been given an opportunity to study the trapping methods most effective and also the best way to care for the tiny pellets. The year's catch of moles yielded a peltry value in the State of Washington of $60,000 and, due to the efforts of the specialists, a costly nuisance has been reduced.

WIDESPREAD WAR ON WEEDS IS HERE

Government Has on Foot Extensive Weed Survey to Destroy All Weeds.

The United States Department of Agriculture has set on foot what is intended to be the most comprehensive weed survey ever undertaken. Up to date comparatively little is known of American farm weeds. They are classified in botanies and herbariums, but there are no definite data in regard to their spread; the prevalence of any particular weed in any locality; the amount of annual damage; new weeds, increase of old species; or local methods of eradication.

To supply the need for such data, the section of weed investigations has sent a questionnaire to all the more than 2,000 country agents of the department. This questionnaire asks the names of the five worst weeds in each county in order of their importance; the methods if any used by farmers to combat these weeds; and what weed problems are especially serious in any particular county.

Comparatively few native American weeds have given farmers serious trouble, but new varieties are constantly arriving in foreign seed and through other sources. Some of these have become pests that entire farms have been abandoned to them. A canvass of 200 representative eastern farmers showed that an average of 22 days a year is spent at the busiest season in trying to get rid of weeds. Investigation by the Bureau of Plant Industry over a number of years are taken to indicate that cultivation after the seed bed is prepared has no other use than to destroy weeds. If this heavily still to the annual expense chargeable to weeds.

It is the purpose of the department to use the projected survey as a basis of operation in directing a widespread war on the weeds now here, or the importation of any new ones, and to seek any local eradication methods which may be worth general dissemination.

SAY GERMANS ARE AHEAD OF U. S. IN MAKING DYES.

Paris, Feb. 9.—Germany is now exceeding her pre-war production of coal tar dyes, according to the dye experts attached to the Reparations commission, and by the end of the current month will have surpassed any previous monthly production of fine chemicals.

Color dyes produced during January are estimated to have totaled 12,000 tons or 750 tons more than the average monthly output before the war.

The dye markets in Germany are obliged to place about one-fourth of the reparations commission. The remainder, however, is being offered by the dye syndicate in foreign markets at prices which are understood to be considerably lower than those of the English and American competitors of the syndicate.
